ONE DAY

One day the world will wake up bright,
With kinder words and softer light.
We'll smile at strangers passing by,
And see the good in you and I.

One day we'll listen, not just hear,
To every hope and every fear.
Big voices, quiet ones too,
All will matter, even old and new.

One day no one will stand alone,
No heavy hearts turned hard as stone.
Hands will join in every land,
Different, yet we understand.

One day no one will play alone,
Or sit by themselves at lunch unknown.
We'll hold the door, we'll share our games,
And try our best to learn new names.

One day you'll dance the way you feel,
Or draw, or build, or score a goal.
You can be brave, you can be shy,
And dream big dreams that reach the sky.

One day we'll learn that being fair
Means taking turns and choosing care.
Not trying to change who others are,
But letting everyone shine like a star.

One day begins with what we do today
With simple things, like saying "thank you."
If kindness starts with us today,
Tomorrow blooms, One Day.
